

RTC Policy on Rebreather Manufacturer's Authority

RTC standards outline the minimum training requirements that must be met for specific levels of diver training. These standards are intended to be generic in respect of the model or make of rebreather used. RTC recognises that the protocols for preparing and operating individual rebreathers may vary from unit to unit. Therefore, RTC recommends that wherever the manufacturer of a particular unit specifies any additional procedures or requirements to those specified in an RTC standard that they should be followed.